

World Trade Center relic coming to OC firehouse

Written by Ann Richardson

Friday, 23 March 2012 02:08

At a March 22 City Council meeting, city business administrator Mike Dattilo announced that an artifact from the World Trade Center would soon be on display at the Ocean City Fire House at Sixth Street between West and Asbury avenues.

“The Port Authority of New York made them available,” throughout the country, Dattilo said.

The city will commission a piece of artwork, he said, to accompany it on the grounds of the Sixth Street Fire House.

The new monument will be unveiled on Sept. 11, 2012. The ceremony, which is customarily at Veteran’s Memorial Field a block away, will be on the grounds of the fire house.